Subject: Your Anderson heritage in Franklin Co., TN

Hi Bill, my name is Jackie Layne Partin, and I am a friend of Barbara Myers. Your mother talked at length with Barbara at the Swiss Celebration at Gruetli. Barbara called and asked me for help in helping your mom with some items of heritage. I wasn't certain what your mom wanted, but I think one thing was to know who the initials stood for in the 1880 Census record for Isaac's family. That is a hard one, but maybe we can work together on it. The first child "S. A." was a girl born ca. 1872--I believe she may have been Sarah A. born ca. 1872 who married Benjamin E. Jones on 07 Jan 1892 in Franklin Co., TN. The second child "M. A." born ca. 1874 remains a mystery for the moment. The third child "J. D." was James Theophilus from the Bible or Thedolphus (Dolph) Anderson born ca. 1876--a twin to the fourth child--I can't explain the initials except that Dolph may have been a nickname that stuck. The fourth child is Sophia J. born ca. 1876--the other twin who married Wm A. Sullivan on 28 Dec 1901--(It appears that Isaac had twin brothers also). The fifth child is Rebecca born ca. 1879. The sixth child is William Patton Anderson born 24 Apr 1881. The seventh child is Lucy born ca. 1884 who is still at home in 1910. The eighth child is Albert Spencer born 19 Apr 1885. The ninth child is Mahala J. born ca. 1889. Isaac and Elizabeth say they had ten children in all with only seven living in 1900. We are still minus a child, but the child could have been stillborn and unnamed. Sarah, Dolph, Sophia, William, Lucy, Albert, and Mahala are still alive in 1900. "M. A." is probably one of those dead: Rebecca is probably dead and then the child that we do not have listed who probably was born and died between the Census records. I have gathered this info from Census records, military records and TN marriage records. I could have it all wrong, but see if this brings any memories for your mom. I have also printed off some work done by others but I can already see mistakes, so I stuck with what I feel like we know. Please ask me for help, and I'll give it a try. jackie

Medical Information: heart problems, shaking caused by childhood catastrophe (see notes page)

· Note:

According to Beula (3rd child) in a letter to Deanna dated Jan 26, 1999, John Pyburn told her several times that his Grandmother was full blood Cherokee and his Mother half Cherokee. His Mother died when he was 11 years old. He had told her of working in the coal mines in Tennessee until he got pneumonia when he was 10 years old. He died, and was laid out for burial, when he revived. This was when he began shaking (some called this St. Vitus Dance). He was not able to go back to the mines at that time, and had to work in the woods. He was in a mining accident at age 19 and with ill health, doctors advised him to go to a warmer climate.

Granddaddy's story in his own words (unknown when written as not dated) In 1902, I was working in the coal mines for the Campbell Coal Company at Orme, Tennessee. I was in entry number 6. We were Working eight hour shifts a day, two men to the shift. My shift began at 8 A.M. and closer at 4 P.M. This entry ran down hill for about three hundred feet, where it turned off from the main entry, and then gradually up hill for half mile to where we worked. The entry men had taken out six feet on the right for room neck, on the left, an air vent had been dug through to entry number 5, which ran parallel to number 6. There was a small drip of water from the top, almost in the center of the entry. I had told the patt boss, the day before, that the roof was unsafe and should be timbered, and he promised to send a crew to set the timbers.

My buddy had taken some picks to the shop and had left me to put in the cutting. This consisted in picking out the coal, which had been partially loosened by firing two shots, one above the other in the face of the coal in the center of the entry, and near the bottom. The vein of coal was about six feet thick in this place. I had worked my way back about five feet, when I heard a rumble like distant thunder, and before I could extricate myself from the cutting, I was caught by a downpour of water, mud and rock. Tons upon tons kept breaking loose and coming down, and one large piece closed against my back. This was fortunate, because, it caught o both joints of my cutting, and became a closed door, holding back the crushing weight that sought to destroy me. The water and mud were moving down the slope. My dinner basket was at the tool box in the air vent, about twenty feet away. I realized that I was entombed and that my chances of escape were very slim.

I was in a cramped position, but I could breathe. The air vent was close enough and the water seemed to freshen the air, so that I did not suffocate, although, I could not move. I soon lost all sense of time. My light was blown out by the fall and I had no way of re lighting it. Time moved slowly and I became thirsty and hungry. I was fully aware that I could have neither drink nor food. I began to get numb and cold. This was distressing. I could not exercise. I either went to sleep or lost consciousness for a time. I awoke to a tapping in the distance and knew the crew had arrived to set me free.

A pump was now installed at the bottom of the slope and the water was being pushed to the outside. Only four men could work at a time, so they worked in relays of four hours each. Mining cars hold one ton each. They were switched into a room near by and when one was loaded, it was pushed beyond the room neck and an empty one took it's place. Timbers were handled the same way. Hitches were cut in the walls of the entry and the timbers were set in rows side by side, along on each side and with a layer on top, made a solid enclosure, which protected the men from falling debris and eventually would make a way for my escape.

I knew, that if I could hold out long enough, they would rescue me. This, I was determined to do. But, as time, went on, I became weak and uncertain of the outcome. If I could have moved about a little or could have see, anything, or eaten anything, I would have been more normal. This was all denied me. I thought of Christ in the tomb, and of Jonah in the whale, and how they must have suffered. At times, I was delirious, at times I was cold, at times hot, at times nauseated and sick.

After seventy-six hours in this sitting position, the large stone was rolled away and I moved for the first time. Two company doctors took over. I was hauled by a mule in a mining car to the outside, where my car was pulled by engine to the tipple. At the tipple, I was taken on the incline car to the foot of the mountain, where stretcher was waiting to take me to the doctor's office. Here, I was properly treated and fed. In about a week I was back on the job.

Some of the after effects of this ordeal: In about three months, my hair had turned from a light brown to a light grey. My joints had failed to loosen up. In fact, I was growing stiffer, and my knees, hips, shoulder and elbows were becoming sore and painful. The company doctors gave me medicine, but it gave little relief..I gradually grew worse. When I held a pick or shovel handle for awhile, my fellow worker would have to unclasp my hands from it. After about two years, I had become so incapacitated, that I had to quit. Most of my joints were swollen and sore. The doctors told me that I had arthritis. They advised me to go to a dry country.

On the sixth day of September, 1904, I boarded a train a Tracy City, Tennessee, for Dallas, Texas, arriving there the eigth of the same month. The town was full of farmers who were looking for cotton pickers. I went out with a Mr. Eccles. It was late when we got to his house and his family was in bed. He took me to the bunk house and soon I was asleep. The next morning, I was awakened by his calling to come to breakfast. He had wife and eight children, three of whom, two boys and one girl, were grown. After breakfast, I was given a nine foot sack and went with the children to the cotton patch. After working my best for about two hours, I had picked three pounds of cotton. When I managed to pick it, I couldn't turn it loose. I was helpless as far as picking cotton was concerned. I had to walk nine miles back to Dallas. In Dallas I was tired and desperate. I was desperate for two principle reasons. I had not found work that I could do. Second, I must work because an older sister and I were raising two brothers (twins), eighteen months old, and a sister four years old, orphaned by our Mother's death.

A cop asked me why I was back in town, and I told him, I could not pick cotton because of stiff fingers. He said I would have to go to work or to jail. While we were talking, a farmer approached and asked if I wanted a job gathering corn; I accepted. He took me to Red Oak, Texas.

He had 640 acres (a square mile) in one field. I explained my physical condition. He was very sympathetic. His wife was confined to her bed most of the time with the same thing. He told me not to pick up an ear of corn when it fell to the ground. I gathered that field in about three months. Then he took me to a neighbor, Tom Ham, who had a smaller field of corn.

I was better, my whole body was limbering up, and I could get about much better. I was not cured, but warm fall weather had certainly brought a change in my body. Mr. Ham and I became friends by the time I had gathered his corn. Fall was gone and winter was fast approaching; a dry blue norther had already denuded vegetation of it's summer coat. The fields were bare, Seasonal labor was over no more work until cotton chopping time about four months away. Mr. Ham advised me to go to school and told me to Texas Christian University (T.C. U.), at Waco, where I could work my way through.

I had decided to go, but I had doubts about getting in, for I had only nine months schooling; three, when I was seven, three, when eight, and three, when nine. On January fifth, I left Red Oak on a south bound train to Waco. On January 6, 1905, after a long joint interview with President Zallars, and Vice-President Anderson, I was admitted. Since, at that time of year all the jobs had been filled, I had to take odd jobs and substitute for anyone who might get sick. While watching for work, I noticed when the school wanted any hauling done, it called someone in town to do it. The same for students. I asked for and got this work. I bought a horse and wagon and posted my work hours on the bulletin board in the hall of the administration building. From this work, I had a net income of about fifty dollars a month. Soon, one of the dish washers quit, and the job was given to me. This job, paid my board and room. These two jobs I held until graduation day, five and a half school years later. I sent for the twins and put them in school and had a little money to send to my sisters.

On December 23, before I graduated in June, 1910, I married Ethel Mae Kelley, whom I had met at the University. In the fall of 1910, I accepted the principalship of a school and with the consent of my wife, I sent for my two sisters. I retired after forty years in the schools of Texas, Oklahoma, and New Mexico. I moved to Lovington (New Mexico), twenty eight years ago, and taught in the schools here eight years. We had a son and three daughters of our own, all of who married and left years ago.

I have a walking stick and a pair of crutches, that I manage to get around with. A neighbor brought me an ultra violet lamp, about two weeks ago, but like dozens of other remedies I have tried through the years, it helps but does not cure. And when I read of men being trapped in the mines, my heart goes out to them, because I know if they escape death, and most of them do not escape it, the shock and exposure, may disable them for the rest of their lives.

I was boarding at a place built on a hillside and a work shop was under my room. One night, I thought the top was caving in, and I went through a glass window to the ground, thirteen feet below cutting myself badly with the glass and severely spraining a wrist. I have known several that had nightmares and night hallucinations, as long as they lived after going through one of these underground experiences.

This may never be published, if it is, I would like to thank the school boards for whom I have worked, the school patrons, the pupils and my fellow teachers for their kindly forbearance of my affliction, for the meager returns I pay as a teacher, I wish also to thank my daughter and her husband D.M. Costlow for the 1958 subscription to the Readers Digest.

Six years ago, I had a rather severe heart attack, and the doctor ordered a complete rest from all labors. So I patiently await the day when I can lay away my cane and crutches and take my vacation in the great beyond, where God rebuilds the broken soul.

(signed) J.W. (John Wesley) Pyburn 203 North 4th Street Lovington, New Mexico

Note from Granddaughter Deanna: Granddaddy was a big man, over 6'4", wore a size 13 shoe. He was the most gentle man I have ever in my life ever known. He never ceased to love to learn. He was always reading, conversing with others, and most of all staying close to our Lord. He and Uncle Tom (his only son), built the home located at the address above. Many of the rocks used in building this grand old house, he and Uncle Tome hauled from areas many miles away and alone set them in the walls of the two-story home. I asked him one time if he grew up like Abe Lincoln in a one room cabin and studied by lamplight, and he answered me "I did exactly that". I asked him what he found to do in the woods, and he told stories of how he hunted for bear an other game armed only with his bare hands. With the size of those hands, I suppose he did just that too. My Mother, Lavina was the eldest daughter and the closest to Granddaddy, and it still Greaves her to this day, losing him. But, when I see in my memory the shaking hands and head as well as the body of that grand old gentleman, I am thankful that he no longer suffers. In closing, I just want to say to him "Granddaddy, you may never have had your story published by a professional, but your granddaughter published it in her family tree". This is written in loving memory of a great man!
